REPORT ON WOMEN IN SPACE

The seminar was given by students and the content was very interesting. The students talked about different female astronauts and gave valuable information. The students of second year were motivated and understood that nothing is impossible and gender is not any hurdle to reach their goals.

General Facts: 59 different women total including cosmonauts, astronauts, payload specialists, and foreign nationals have flown in space. 4 different female space flight participants have flown on the Soviet/Russian program: July 25, 1984, Savitskaya became the first woman to spacewalk, conducting EVA outside the Salyut 7 space station for 3 hours and 35 minutes, during which she cut and welded metals in space along with her colleague Vladimir Dzhanibekov. Of the 57 Soviet/Russian spacewalkers through 2010, she is the only woman

For many decades there has been growing awareness that empowerment of women is crucial to various development agendas. There is now near universal consensus that empowering women in the form of education, representation in legislative bodies and policy making institutions, financial assistance and recognition of their rights is essential to all democratic societies. Such empowerment strategies challenge traditional notions of development which are male centric. Inclusion of women in various policies brings them into the mainstream. Their participation would allow them exercise power which would otherwise be denied. Such participation in political and economic structures allows them to have access to the opportunities necessary for exercising their rights. It follows from the realization that family, which is essentially a patriarchal institution, would not provide sufficient opportunities for women to raise their social and economic status. It is in this context that other public institutions such as government, banks, and industry have formulated their developmental strategies involving active role for women. For instance government has introduced reservation for women in local government and educational institutions. Similarly gender budgeting came to define annual budget making process that caters to the women centric policies.

With an aim to spread awareness about various policies of the government and other agencies about women empowerment CMRCET the Student Counseling Centre in collaboration with Women Empowerment cell -MUDITA conducted a one day session on Women Empowerment.
